

DIAC receives students from Law faculty of the Gulf Cooperation University College

On July 12th, 2005, students from the Law faculty of the Gulf Cooperation University College visited the Dubai International Arbitration Centre (DIAC). The visit was part of their business law module, whereby the students explored how useful arbitration could be as a suitable means to resolving commercial disputes in the business world.

During their visit, the students attended a brief presentation by Dr. Hussam Al Talhuni, Director of DIAC whereby he spoke about the various services and facilities offered at DIAC.

Dr. Al Talhuni also gave brief explanations about the different aspects of arbitration, such as online disputes and the public policy stance towards enforcing arbitration awards. During the presentation, there were several questions from the students on a variety of issues pertaining to arbitration within the UAE and the Centre.
